About the Faculty of Law

Established in 1924, the Faculty of Law is a premier department of the University of Delhi, an institution of national importance under Entry 63 of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution of India. As a national center for legal education, it has produced generations of eminent jurists, Supreme Court and High Court judges, leading senior advocates, political leaders, policymakers, and public intellectuals. Despite its illustrious alumni, the Faculty remains committed to egalitarian ideals, offering high-quality legal education at nominal cost. Strategically located in the heart of Delhi, it attracts a diverse student body from across India and abroad. With over 10,000 students enrolled in LL.B., B.A. LL.B. (Hons.), B.B.A. LL.B. (Hons.), LL.M., and Ph.D. programs, it is among the largest law schools in the world.

The Faculty fosters academic excellence through its distinguished teaching staff, multicultural learning environment, and a robust calendar of seminars, conferences, moot courts, and workshops. It regularly hosts scholars from renowned national and international institutions under various fellowships and MoUs aimed at global academic exchange. A pioneer in areas like Intellectual Property Rights, Human Rights, Environmental Law, and Gender Justice, the Faculty has significantly influenced legal reform in India. Faculty members have contributed to laws against dowry deaths, media accountability, women's and children's rights, and the promotion of secularism.

With growing emphasis on corporate, financial, and technology law, the Faculty remains aligned with India's evolving legal and economic landscape. Its faculty are deeply involved in mentoring, accessible beyond the classroom, and dedicated to socially relevant legal education.

The Faculty of Law is dedicated to nurturing future legal professionals and public leaders. It instills in its students a strong sense of purpose and a deep commitment to social justice. Guided by a rich tradition of excellence in teaching, research, and public service, the Faculty continues to play a pivotal role in shaping the legal landscape of the country.

About the Conference

Delimitation plays a crucial role in upholding democracy and adapting to the evolving demographics of the country. It is vital for ensuring fair representation in elections, addressing key issues such as population shifts, equal voting power, gerrymandering, and the balance of representation between urban and rural areas.

Since independence, India has conducted four delimitation exercises based on census data to maintain a balanced and representative democratic system. These exercises involve redrawing the boundaries of electoral constituencies to reflect demographic changes, ensuring that each vote carries equal weight and minimizing the risk of political manipulation.

As the country approaches 2026, debates surrounding the upcoming delimitation exercise have gained prominence. At the heart of this discussion lies the challenge of balancing population-based representation with the principles of federal equity. Demographic trends vary significantly across states—those that have effectively curbed population growth through progressive policies may face a reduction in parliamentary representation. In contrast, states with higher population growth could gain disproportionately, raising fundamental questions about democratic fairness, the incentives for good governance, and the very nature of India's federal compact.

The Supreme Court of India, in the classic case on delimitation Kishorchandra Chhanganlal Rathod v. Union of India, (2024) 7 SCR 1124, has established that the judgment in Meghraj Kothari v. Delimitation Commission, AIR 1967 SC 669, does not impose an absolute restriction on judicial review. The Honourable Court emphasized that a complete bar on judicial intervention would deprive citizens of any platform to articulate their grievances, thereby leaving them entirely at the discretion of the Delimitation Commission. Such a circumstance would contradict the Court's role as a constitutional entity and its obligation to safeguard the public interest, as well as the principle of separation of powers. Nonetheless, the Court recognized that the finality of the Delimitation Act is safeguarded under Article 329 of the Constitution, a position that was reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in Public Interest Committee for Scheduling Specific Areas & Ors. v. Union of India, (2023) 16 SCR 1074 ruling that in view of Article 329, Delimitation Notification is beyond the realm of judicial review.

The integration of technology into the delimitation process offers several advantages. It enables more accurate, data-driven, and transparent redrawing of constituency boundaries, reducing human error and potential bias, thereby upholding the principles of representative democracy. However, technology also presents challenges. Technologies like digital processes may exclude stakeholders unfamiliar with such tools, leading to a lack of inclusivity. There is also a risk of data manipulation or misuse if proper checks and balances are not in place.

Against this backdrop, the Faculty of Law, University of Delhi, a premier legal institution takes pride in organizing a two day international Conference on “Delimitation In India: Balancing Representation And Federal Equity.” The conference provides a valuable platform for academics, lawyers, NGOs, intellectuals, policymakers, bureaucrats and and experts from diverse fields to engage in informed and meaningful dialogue on the subject. Renowned national and international experts and practitioners are invited to deliberate on the legal, policy, administrative, and social dimensions of the conference's central theme and its sub-themes
